Holidays Create More Foodwaste

As the holidays approach, the anticipated excitement of preparing meals from long-standing traditions of favorite recipes with special meaning is an annual treat for many.

After the food purchases, cooking, and celebrations, properly managing leftover food scraps plays an important role in the cleanup process.

Foodwaste accounts for approximately one-third of the material that ends up in a landfill. Californians toss out more than six million tons of foodwaste each year. Here are a few simple reminders that can help with reducing foodwaste from making its way to a landfill.

- Take a list to the grocery store
- Buy only what you need
- Don't go hungry to the store
- Give guests leftovers in reusable containers
- Freeze leftovers for a future meal
- Add food scraps to a composting bin
- Donate to local Food Banks
